The costs associates with in vitro fertilization (IVF) and other medical treatments for infertility, the fact most insurance companies do not provide coverage for many types of fertility treatments, and the cost of alternatives such as adoption, leaves many couples suffering from infertility with little hope for realizing their dreams of a family. INCIID, as the world's leading infertility consumer advocate and provider of information and support related to fertility, family-building and pregnancy loss, has launched a program to assist those without financial means. The program provides donated medical services to worthy recipients who do not have insurance to cover the IVF procedure. Hundreds of IVF cycles have been provided through the program since its inception.
