

Learning to Think Like a Lawyer

In our first INCIID article we said you don't have to be a lawyer to be a good parent advocate; "You just need to know how to think like one."

Well - surprise, surprise. If you Google the term "think like a lawyer" you will find lawyers do not have a universal definition of what thinking like a lawyer means. There are thousands of articles, blog articles, academic papers, and web sites that talk about what it means to think like a lawyer.

Experience taught me that parents are far more aware of what their child's special education problem is than others realize. The rub comes when parents do not know how to explain the problems in a way the procedural system deals with resolving problems.

The one word that appears in all the articles I read about thinking like a lawyer is the word analysis.

Analysis goes like this -

What's the big deal here?

Are there any rules that tell us how to deal with the big deal?

Is there any credible proof (facts) that the big deal really is a big deal?

What rules tell us how to formally complain about the big deal, and

Where can we find insights into how the big deal deciders have decided big deals?
